RESOLUTION SONG sings into stores EVERYWHERE by tackling the gray areas between black & white race relations.

The cries of a tragic death cannot muffle the sounds of racial discord!

ATLANTA (January 2, 2018) – Director Antonio James, announced today that Resolution Song will be released nationwide. Resolution Song, a dramatic faith-based film, follows Margaret (played by Kevin Hart’s ex-wife Torrei Hart), a submissive stay-at-home mom, as her family copes with the tragic death of her eldest son. Margaret struggles to keep her cheating husband (Lester Speight) and emotionally strained family, from losing faith.

Commenting on the release, “I obtained a script about faith and family, but created so much more,” said Antonio James, award-winning Resolution Song Director. “Faith is always challenged, yet no one talks about how the family can be THE reason you lose faith,” he concluded, “Resolution Song shows that dynamic.”

Resolution Song completed production in 2016 as race, social division and sexual transgressions echoed throughout America. In 2017, America became the forefront of race, social division, and sexual transgressions, all of which is part of Resolution Song’s theme and appeal.

With America's bipolar social climate into consideration, Resolution Song exposes racial tension, challenges faith, and directly questions the dynamics of the family structure by exploring the aftermath of a tragic situation. Within Resolution Song, no one is exempt of this tragedy, and similar to today, it is everyone responsibility to reclaim his or her faith and forgive thy neighbor. The film also stars John J. York (General Hospital), Kennedy Slocum (Nickelodeon's Witz Academy), and Ella Joyce (Set It Off).
